The information in this document forms part of the Product Disclosure Statements for AMIST Super Employer Sponsored and Personal Divisions dated 3 March 2018.

How does AMIST Super work?

AMIST Super receives contributions made by you and your employer. These are invested in your choice of up to six different investment options. Investment earnings are allocated to your account, based on the crediting rates declared for the option(s) that your money was invested in. For details of how investment earnings are allocated, please refer to the AMIST Super Investment Guide.

Apart from helping you save for retirement, AMIST Super also looks after members with automatic Life Insurance, Total and Permanent Disablement (TPD) insurance as well as Income Protection cover. Further detail on the available cover is provided in the AMIST Super Insurance Guide.

Deductions are taken from your account at the end of each month to cover administration costs, any insurance premiums, and Commonwealth Government taxes where applicable. Details of deductions can be found in the AMIST Super Fees and other costs Fact Sheet.

When you leave AMIST Super, you will receive a lump sum payment of the balance of your account, less any tax payable at the time and a withdrawal fee of $50. If you are eligible for release of the benefits, the payment will be made to you by cheque. If you are rolling your money to another superannuation fund then we will transfer the funds electronically. See the AMIST Super Benefits Fact Sheet for further details.

If you are over early retirement age you can also choose to transfer your balance to the AMIST Pension. See the AMIST Super Benefits Fact Sheet for more details.

Are there any risks associated with being a member of AMIST Super?

There are risks associated with any type of investment. You should be aware, for example, that regardless of the investment option you choose, the value of your investment can rise and fall with the movements of investment markets. This is important to understand, because you may get back less money than you invested. Even if the investment does not fall in value, it may not perform as you expected. A further risk is that the Trustee may not be able to meet its stated aims and objectives. For a detailed overview of risks please see the AMIST Super Investment Guide.

Your account with AMIST Super

When you start working with a company that participates in AMIST Super, a member account will be set up in your name and your employer will pay superannuation contributions for you into that account. You will receive a letter welcoming you as a new member of AMIST Super and it will include details about your account, including your membership number. Keep this number handy as you'll need to give it to us whenever you call or email us.

Deposits to your account can include:

- Contributions paid by your employer,
- Contributions that your employer is required to pay under an Award, Industrial Agreement or under Superannuation Guarantee legislation,
- Salary Sacrifice contributions (see the website for information on salary sacrificing),
- Any personal contributions that you pay into AMIST Super from your after-tax pay. These can be made by payroll deduction, automatic bank transfer, BPAY, cheque or money order, or as transferred amounts from other funds (rollovers),
- Commonwealth Government Co-contributions (if applicable).

Deductions from your account can include:

- Administration fees,
- Insurance premiums (if applicable),
- Commonwealth Government Contributions Tax,
- Additional Commonwealth Government Tax (if applicable). Additional tax may be payable for making contributions above the permitted levels, or where you have not provided your Tax File Number,
- Commonwealth Government Surcharge (if applicable).

Investment earnings

Investment earnings are applied to your account at 30 June each year, after the deduction of fees and taxes. The earnings of each of our investment options will differ, so you will receive earnings at the rate applicable to the investment option(s) your money is in.

Earnings for each financial year are applied after a final audit of the fund's net assets has taken place, which normally occurs in the first week of September each year. Details of the performance of your superannuation investments are provided in your member statement which we mail to you twice a year.
